

(#443). LOS JUGADORES MÁS PRODUCTIVOS DE LA NBA 2019/20

[MONOTEMA] Mantendré actualizada cada semana (más o menos) la productividad por partido de los jugadores de la NBA. Para ello emplearé el índice PTC (Player Total Contribution), que creé a comienzos de 2019, y cuya génesis puede consultarse aquí.

Puedes ordenar de mayor a menor las productividades en la columna correspondiente. El mínimo para aparecer en la tabla es haber jugado al menos un tercio de los partidos de la temporada (en cada momento de la misma). Primero se muestra el Top-10.

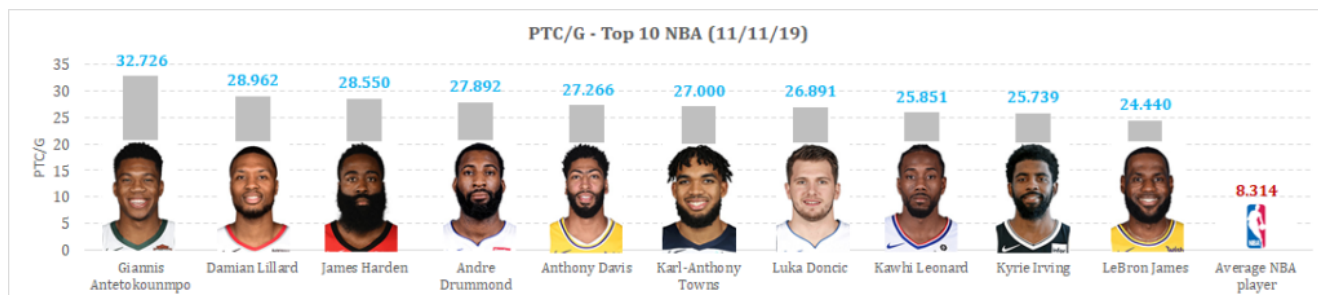

También hay una estimación de las victorias producidas en relación al jugador promedio (PTCwp), cuya justificación está aquí. Recordad que es una estimación para dar algo de sentido a las unidades de PTC, pero hay una imprecisión a tener en cuenta, por lo que es sólo una aproximación. Cuantos más partidos se juegue mayor será el PTCwp, ya que es un índice que mide las victorias producidas totales.

Debajo, además, se pueden consultar dos gráficos de los equipos; En el primero de ellos se refleja la distribución de las productividades entre los jugadores, mientras que en el segundo se muestra la concentración de productividades dentro de cada equipo. La idea es aproximarnos a la importancia que tiene cada jugador dentro de su equipo.

Por último, estos datos no tienen en cuenta el momento del partido en el que se realizan las acciones (el valor de cada acción en función del resultado, y las posesiones restantes), cuyo método de cálculo puede encontrarse aquí. Y es evidente, que un índice numérico no va a reflejar todos los intangibles, aunque es cierto que la génesis del PTC explica más de un 80% de variación del diferencial de puntos de los partidos, sólo con las variables del box-score. De este modo, es una aproximación muy a tener en cuenta.
